A: Background Information for Emergency Planning

No one can predict when an emergency might happen or how severe it will be. It is prudent to plan for one, especially since these plans can be applied to any major emergency that could threaten the health and safety of the campus community or disrupt University programs and essential operations. This plan should address any kind of emergency that is severe enough to impact the NMSU community including an infectious disease epidemic, severe weather events, fires or explosions, hazardous materials releases, extended utility outages, floods, terrorism or mass casualty events.

In the event of an emergency, NMSU will have four objectives:

- Protect life and health
- Safeguard our critical infrastructure (support, facilities and operations)
- Continue functions essential to university operations
- Resume normal teaching, research and service operations as soon as possible

B: Your Department's Objectives Considering your department's unique mission, describe your teaching, research and service objectives:

C: More Information Regarding Your Department

E: Emergency Access to Information and Systems If access to your department's information and systems is essential in an emergency, describe your emergency access plan below. This may include remote access (or authorization to allow remote access), contacting IT support, Canvas, off-site data backup, backup files on flash drives, hard copies, Smart phone or use of alternate email systems (e.g., Yahoo, Gmail). Identify what critical data and records are backed up, whether the back up is stored on-site or off-site. Simulate a failure scenario that tests the ability to recover "lost" critical data. Describe how your department will respond to the destruction of critical data. List essential functions that will need to have remote access to systems and individual's authorized to perform temporary but critical "work from home".
